

The Roles We Play

Recognising the Contribution
Of People in Poverty

The Roles We Play: Challenging Perceptions of Poverty, a new, multimedia exhibition from ATD Fourth World and Eva Sajovic, is now touring the country.

This new exhibition, showcasing short films as well as photographs and text from the book The Roles We Play: Recognising the Contribution of People Living in Poverty, aims to challenge negative stereotypes of people who experience poverty and social exclusion.

Addressing the launch of the touring exhibition, one participant said, “The project has helped me be able to talk to other people and not be ashamed that we live in poverty. It may still be a struggle but we are getting there...”

HOW TO GET INVOLVED:

Help us build new perceptions of others around us and strengthen community cohesion by inviting us to organise an event at a venue of your choice. Here's what we have to offer...

Exhibitions: This could be anything from free-standing portraits in a community café to a larger installation at a gallery or museum.

Book stalls: Book stalls and info stands can be set up anywhere from local library foyers to festivals.

Panel discussions and workshops: Our participatory panel discussions and workshops aim to engage with people from different communities encouraging them to work together to challenge negative stereotypes.
